[Spring Workshop 2015] Summary Feedback

Thanks to everyone who chimed in to give us such extensive feedback on this year's workshop. What has been an interesting trend to see is how our community is growing with so many new members: It's a near split between those that are first timers and long-time participants. This is also represented similarly in the feedback responses. Some points well-taken on workshop improvements are the ...

[Spring 2015 Workshop] ETUG, My High5s

Contributed by Leva Lee As we wind up another year of learning and look forward to the rejuvenation of summer, it's gratifying to take a moment to reflect on our community's premier event of the year: the ETUG Spring workshop. In recent years, we've become more confident in introducing new elements to our workshop programs, and this year our efforts ...

[T.e.I.I. Summary May] Enhancing the Online Experience for Students (and Instructors!) with a Modern Flat-file CMS

Contributed by Keith Webster, UVic

Paul Hibbits, who has presented on a variety of topics at ETUG workshops over the years, brought an interesting look at Grav, a flat-file content management system in a recent TELL session.

Grav is different from typical content management systems like WordPress or Drupal because it does not use a database to store content. ...
